The Prishtina Summer University 2007 offers 15 teaching positions in various disciplines including Law, Economics, Philosophy, Natural Sciences, Mechanical Engineering, Arts, Education and others. Each course is taught by an international visiting professor and a co-professor from the University of Prishtina. Courses are taught in English or English with translation into Albanian. During the summer university, public debates, excursions and social activities will be organised for professors and participants.

20 students are admitted to each three-week course. Most of them are originating from Kosovo. Additionally, 100 international students, mostly from South East Europe, will participate. Visiting professors are provided with a budget to purchase reading materials and teaching equipment. Visiting professors at the PSU teach pro bono. Travel expenses are covered and free accommodation provided. Professors receive a modest allowance of 15 Euro per day. The interested teachers can apply to teach one of the courses suggested by the University of Prishtina (more on suggested courses on the homepage of the University of Prishtina) or a course on a topic of their own choice.
